

DUNCAN'S DAILY DRILL

Week 14

DDD #48- Commas & apostrophes

Copy the sentence, then fix the errors in punctuation.

1. Within minutes sheets of rain were sweeping in the steady hiss of water swelling in my ears

2. He was taking us to Jalalabad about 170 kilometers southeast of Kabul where his brother Toor who had a bigger truck with a second convoy of refugees was waiting to drive us across the Khyber Pass and into Peshawar

3. Kamals lifeless body lay on his fathers lap

DDD #48- Commas & apostrophes

Copy the sentence, then fix the errors in punctuation.

1. Within minutes, sheets of rain were sweeping in, the steady hiss of water swelling in my ears.
2. He was taking us to Jalalabad, about 170 kilometers southeast of Kabul, where his brother, Toor, who had a bigger truck with a second convoy of refugees, was waiting to drive us across the Khyber Pass and into Peshawar.
3. Kamal's lifeless body lay on his father's lap.

DDD #49- semicolons, colons, & stuff

Copy the sentence, then fix the errors in punctuation.

1. I could step into that alley stand up for Hassan the way hed stood up for me all those times in the past and accept whatever would happen to me

2. I glanced at him across the table his nails chipped and black with engine oil his knuckles scraped the smells of the gas station dust sweat and gasoline on his clothes

3. I saw pictures of the people who would become my new family a young bouffant haired Khanum Taheri and the general Niagara Falls in the background Khanum Taheri in a seamless dress

DDD #49- semicolons, colons, & stuff

Copy the sentence, then fix the errors in punctuation.

1. I could step into that alley, stand up for Hassan — the way he'd stood up for me all those times in the past — and accept whatever would happen to me.

2. I glanced at him across the table, his nails chipped and black with engine oil, his knuckles scraped, the smells of the gas station — dust sweat and gasoline — on his clothes.

3. I saw pictures of the people who would become my new family: a young bouffant haired Khanum Taheri and the general — Niagara Falls in the background; Khanum Taheri in a seamless dress . . . (Hosseini 167).